SYNTHESIS

Antonio di Campli, born 1970 in Ortona, Italy is architect and scholar in urban design and history of urbanism. He received a Ph.D. in Urban Planning from the University of Chieti-Pescara and a Master of Architecture from the IUAV University in Venice, degree thesis supervisor professor Bernardo Secchi. His research projects won grants from Politecnico di Torino, Italy, Università di Camerino, Italy, Universidad Tecnica Particular de Loja, Ecuador. He received prestigious fellowships from EPFL, École Polytechnique Fédérale de Lausanne, Switzerland Politecnico di Torino, Italy and Senescyt, Secretaría Nacional de Educación Superior, Ciencia, Tecnología e Innovación, Quito, Ecuador. In 2014 he obtained the National Scientific Qualification to function as an Associate Professor in Italian Universities. He has taught at many universities in Europe and Latin America. He also served in the planning expert committees of a few Latin American cities. He is regularly involved in designing, preparing, co-ordinating and delivering modules to a range of students on different UG and PGT courses, exploring a range of approaches to L&T. He currently teaches Theory of Urbanism at the University of Camerino, School of Architecture and Design, Ascoli Piceno, Italy. He also supervises doctoral students and UG/PG dissertation students.

His research and scholar interests lie at the intersection of urban design, social sciences and landscape theories. Concepts such as ‘interface’, ‘density’, ‘proximity’ and ‘interiority’ can be considered as particular ‘aggregation’ devices of his three main research fields:

1 Relationships between urban design strategies and landscape design theories. Here he is interested in questioning the often opaque relationships between urban regeneration processes, cultural discourses, landscape and power.

2 Reconstruction of genealogies of the ‘postmodern turn’ in the practices of urban design. This research field presents an historical perspective on the invention of urban design and its often opaque relationship with environmental design discourses and techniques.

3 Definition of innovative urban-environmental interfaces. Here he is interested in questioning the sense and meaning of contemporary urban ecologies focusing on concepts such as ‘mixité’, ‘interiority’, privacy and publicity in contemporary urban design strategies. In particular, the definition of innovative urban densification strategies in his last Post-doc research, was connected to the definition of new ecological design strategies to urban development as premises for ‘incrementalist’ design solutions.

He has authored several books including:

Challenging the Lettered City. Antagonist Forms of Urbanism in Latin America, Gorizia, 2017.

Densificar la ciudad. Cuestiones, problemas y diseño urbano en Ecuador, Quito, 2016.

Working through Hiroshima. Arata Isozaki’s Destructive Visions, Roma, 2015

Forme di comunità. L’abitare condiviso ad Ibiza, Skopje, Hiroshima, Roma, 2013

La ricostruzione del Crystal Palace. Per un ripensamento del progetto urbano, Macerata, 2011

Adriatico. La città dopo la crisi, Barcelona/Trento, 2010

He has edited the books:

Il progetto dello spazio turistico. Forme del radicamento e dell'effimero, Gorizia, 2016

(with Alessandro Gabbianelli)

Arona. Strategie e pratiche del progetto urbanistico, Milano, 2008

Interfacce costiere, Roma, 2006
